

SCOTT ALTMAN ON FOX TUESDAY WRAP TRANSCRIPT

Eben Brown: 00:06 - 17:07

Scott Altman had his NASA career flying on four shuttle missions. He was the commander of Atlantis, flying to reach the Hubble Space Telescope to make repairs. He's now with NASA's contractor, ASRC Federal, and hopes that a new moon mission captures imaginations and pushes kids towards careers.

Scott Altman: 17:08 - 35:23

And I think that sense of adventure is being ignited in the next generation. And one of our missions right now is to continue to spread the word, let people know that something's coming. And even if somebody doesn't get to become an astronaut or go to the moon, they may play a key role in another area that's really just as important.

Eben Brown: 35:23 - 45:09

The Artemis missions will include the building of permanent lunar bases where people could spend weeks or months. In Broward County, Florida. Eben Brown, Fox News.
